

RICHARD JOHNSON

Ron Darling producing wine for a good cause

By Richard Johnson

May 5, 2014 | 6:28pm

Darling is teaming up with restaurant bigs to produce a new red Syrah wine. All proceeds from "Darling Reserve" will go to battle Type 1 diabetes.

Photo: Getty Images

MORE FROM RICHARD JOHNSON

A 'riot' at the White House Correspondents' dinner after-party

Secret Service on the hunt for cupcakes in NYC

Famed fashion designer 'so broke he worked for Halston'

Women dish out etiquette advice to Miley and Bieber

Mystery buyer snatches East

When Ron Darling ordered Kathie Lee Gifford's Giffit Chardonnay at Neary's the other night, you could say he was doing research.

The Mets pitching great and TBS commentator has teamed up with restaurant bigs Steve McFadden and Paul Favale to produce a new red Syrah wine out of the Donelan vineyard in California.

All proceeds from "Darling Reserve" will go to battle Type 1 diabetes, which afflicts Darling's son Jordan.

Gifford's wine must have been good. The Yalie was singing along to all the Mavis Staples parts when The Band's "The Weight" came on.

FILED UNDER KATHIE LEE GIFFORD, RON DARLING

STAY UP TO DATE

GET HEADLINES & BREAKING NEWS DELIVERED BY EMAIL

SIGN UP NOW

NEW YORK POST

NOW ON

pal's wedding

Court releases Chris Brown bodyguard assault trial photos

Johnny Weir calls off divorce for second time in two months

Barry's Bootcamp split: Wife alleges husband is violent pill-popper

Gay college basketball player dating 'CSI' star